What's the difference between Champagne & English Brut?

Depending who you ask you will get a "grape variety" of answers, but "drinking the stuff" we found very little difference except for the price! The Champagne region in north east France has a fairly unique climate & geology that gives the wine its distinct flavour, with global warming giving us warmer English summers & our chalky soil, English Brut in our opinion has a similar if not better flavour. So go ahead & give our English Brut's a try if nothing else comparing the two can be great fun!

2012 Herbert Hall Brut Reserve £39.95

2012 Herbert Hall Brut Rose £39.95

Planted in 2007 on south facing gravel & clay slopes outside the village of Marden, 'Garden of England'. The Reserve is elegant pale straw wine, great freshness & finesse, crisp taste & purity of fruit. Herbert Hall Brut Rosé uses a higher percentage of Pinot noir which adds softness to its hints of red fruit. Both are exceptional examples of English sparkling wine.
